

Kitchen The only moment of colour in this home is the inky-blue island, which is made from a plywood structure covered in Richlite – a surface developed using recycled paper infused with resin. The cabinets at the back wall are also bespoke plywood, this time clad in white Formica. ‘Nerd’ bar stools by David Geckeler for Muuto complete the minimalist look, alongside a slender ‘Miss’ pendant light by Omar Carraglia for Davide Groppi

Dining area Designed by the client, this table was made from solid London Plane wood by Kate Sanger. The rocking chair is a vintage piece belonging to the homeowners (a 21st-birthday present, it has added sentimental value because all three of their children were nursed in it), but for similar, try the ‘J16’ by Hans J Wegner for Fredericia. The other seats are the ‘Stacking Chair’ by Ercol – now available in more colours from L.Ercolani ►
